Conventional Arms for NATO: Who Will Pay?

A major customer of U.S. arms some years buying $22 worth of U.S. arms for every $1 in arms it exports to the United States -West Germany, like other allies, is feeling protectionist pressures, even in military production.

But the outlook could change if new NATO weapons mean jobs for Germans and an infusion of new U.S. technology to breed newly competitive industries. Those are the questions that So-viet leaders, U.S. allies and Americans must ponder as they seek to absorb a rather remarkable and quick shift in the tone of Mr. Reagan's public statements. One White House aide said the shift was "real and very significant. Something has happened to the man." Another said the president hoped that his latest speech "will remove any ambiguity, if it exists, about his personal commitment to the resolution of problems with the Soviet Union."

But some other senior officials are not convinced. While praising Mr. Reagan for choosing a statesmanlike and pragmatic, rather than ideological, approach to dealing with Moscow, they say that the anti-Soviet instincts of the president and some of his closest advisers lie so close to the surface that they may easily and quickly re-

Yet it was a far cry from his first presidential press conference in January 1981, when he said the Russians "reserve unto themselves the right to commit any crime, to lie, to cheat," and from a March 1983 speech in Florida, in which he called the Krewlin "the focus of all evil" and the "evil empire."

Moscow has done many things, such as the 1979 move into Afghan-istan, the 1981 craekdown in Poland and the shooting down of a South Korean jetliner with 269 people aboard last September, to provoke stern denunciations across the U.S. political spectrum.

But the presidential strategy now to tone down the rhetorie, keep up high military spending to show that the United States is not to be tampered with, and coax Moscow into "a discourse to relieve tensions and solve problems. That will be his foremost priority this year and the years ahead," one top White House adviser said.

Mr. Shultz balanced his conciliatory remarks with considerable criticism of the Soviet Union for creating security and human rights problems, by erecting what he called "an artificial barrier" that had "cruelly divided this great continent - and indeed heartlessly divided one of its great nations," a reference to Germany.

In his later press conference, Mr. Shultz said he did not mean to imply that the United States was reneging on its diplomatic ties with East Germany or was casting doubt on the sovereignty of other Soviet bloc nations. leader was assassinated Aug. 21.

Sergeant Mojica said he had been armed with a 45-caliber pistol but had not fired his weapon and was not among the 52 soldiers deployed on the tarmac who had been subjected to paraffin tests, which are used to detect traces of gunpowder. He said he was exempted from the tests after he accounted for all the bullets issued to him on that day. He said he was the leader of a seven-member surveillance team in civilian clothes assigned to the terminal building.

Lebanese Protest Israeli Occupation

SIDON, Lebanon (Reuters) — Angry citizens closed their stions and barricaded highways in southern Lebanon Tuesday to protest Israel's occupation of the area.

Residents said that streets were deserted in the towns of Sidon, Tyre, Nabatiyeh and most southern villages. Amal, the Shiite Moslem militia which called the strike, has complained that Israel is damaging the mral economy by severely restricting movement in and out of the south and by buildozing orchards.

Amal's top official in the south, Mohammed Ghaddar, called on the Lebanese government to send its army, now confined to the Beirut area, to the south to help resistance against Israel.

Pretoria, Mozambique Prepare Pact

JOHANNESBURG (WP) - Talks between South Africa and the Marxist government of Mozambique appear to have cleared the way for a nonaggression pact between the two countries, which accuse each other of harboring enemy insurgents, observers in Pretoria said Tuesday.

After nearly three months of diplomacy by U.S. and Portuguese intermediaries, four working groups from the two countries met in Pretoria and Maputo on Monday. Only terse, noncommittal statements were issued by the groups afterward, but a source in one of the Mozambique delegations was quoted from Maputo as saying the talks on a nonaggression pact had been "highly positive and constructive" but that there was still "a lot of work to be done."

In addition to a nonaggression pact the working groups discussed financial assistance for the hard-pressed economy of Mozambique, the return of South African tourists to its seaside resorts and the running of the Cabora Bassa hydroelectric project on the Zambezi River.

There was a noticable increase of military activity both in the air and on the ground as government forces moved out to meet the guerrilla threat over the weekend. Diplomats in Addis Ababa, the Ethiopian capital, said earlier this week that Ethiopian forces had been put on alert Eritrea in advance of the new offensive.

Relief agency sources confirmed Eritrean rebel claims broadcast over Somali radio that Ethiopian MiG-21 and MiG-23 fighter-bombers counterattacked the border villages after their fall to the guerrillas. One rocket, which the Russians have been developing for more than a decade, is believed to be the most powerful ever assembled and is expected to be used next year to boost into orbit the 110-ton core of a permanent manned space station, said the sources, who monitor Soviet space activities

The second rocket, they said, probably will be used in three or four years to send into orbit a smaller Soviet version of America's reusable space shuttle, capable of carrying two or three persons and supplies between Earth and a space station.

Sources in Moscow have reported the new rocket will develop 11 million pounds (about five million kilograms) of liftoff thrust and be capable of putting 300,000 pounds into orbit. The most powerful rocket ever launched was the Saturn 5. which developed 7.5 million pounds of thrust and could hoist 240,000 pounds into orbit. It was retired after sending American astronauts to the moon.

Deficit Panel

Aides Say Commission Might Lack Credibility

By David Hoffman

K'ashington Past Service WASHINGTON - President Ronald Reagan has indicated to his advisers that in his upcoming State of the Union address he probably will not propose a bipartisan com-mission on the federal deficit, administration sources said.

At a White House meeting to discuss the speech, which is scheduled for Jan. 25, Mr. Reagan expressed doubts that the commission would be seen as a genuine effort to deal with the deficit. "He didn't thick it was believ-nble," one official said.

Sources cautioned, however, the the proposal for a commission had not been discarded. Last week, White House officials were discussing the appointment of a commission as a way out of the political standoff between Mr. Reagan and Congress over the is-sue of deficits and taxes. Mr. Rea-gan has refused to ioclude a major tax increase or substantial spending cuts in his forthcoming budget. Without such steps, experts say, the deficit will be around $180 billion in the 1985 fiscal year.

Mr. Reagao has also ruled out asking Congress for a tax increase that is contingent on congressional approval of his proposed spending cuts, officials said. He is expected, however, to include some relatively minor reveoue items in the budget be submits to Congress on Feb. 1.

Both parties in Congress have indicated their refuctance to make big cuts in domestic spending this year, and Congress is thought oo-likely to vote for a large tax in-crease unless Mr. Reagan first calls

The White House officials who had been discussing the idea of a bipartisan commission on the deficit - which would be appointed this year and make its recommendations after the November election - said they believed this would give the president a defense on the deficit issue in the campaign. But they said the commission might be accused of trying to paper over the delicit problem until after Election Day.

Mr. Reagan also is expected to request the authority to veto individual budget items and to renew his demand for a constitutional amendment to make it more diffi-cult to enact an unbalanced budget. Also Monday, administration officials said Mr. Reagan would withdraw from his fiscal 1985 budget a proposal to save money in the Medicare program by modifying protection against catastrophic illness. Such a proposal would inean submitted a simil proposal last year, but it died in Congress. Officials said the proposal was dropped this year because it might produce an election-year backlash and was unlikely to be passed, in any case.

Officials said this proposal would have saved $800 million in fiscal 1985. The administration is still expected to submit other Medicare cuts that would result io budget savings of about $1.2 bil-

A document prepared several weeks ago by the Office of Management and Budget estimated that Mr. Reagan would seek $8.4 billion in nonmilitary budget cuts for fis-cal year 1985. Officials said Monday that these budget cuts are now estimated to be about $5 billion because the Medicare proposal has been withdrawn and other adjustments bave been made.

Reagan's New Rhetoric

Ronald Reagan ran for president promising to huild up a position of strength from which to negotiate with the Soviet Union and otherwise to check Soviet power. He has been building up and applying American strength, but in arms control the Soviets have declined to negotiate with him, and in Third World conflicts they have kept the heat on. The resulting spectacle of arms without arms control and of Third World tension has alarmed many Americans. To reduce their anxieties and to reduce the burden that their anxieties place on his negotiating position and political prospects, Mr. Reagan gave a speech on Monday in which be counseled firmness and said be would meet Moscow halfway. Mr. Reagan could hardly have been expected to say — even if he believed it, which he does not — that his policy of the first three years has failed and so he is changing course. That was what some of his critics hoped be would do, reality be damned. But the Reagan reasoning leaves no chance of it. If there were ever going to be a payoff on the president's policy of "restoring deterrence" - that reasoning runs — it was always going to come later rather than sooner and it still may occur. For their part, the Soviets smart at the thought of giving Mr. Reagan an election-year payoff. Countering their inclination to hang tough and confound him, however, is their awareness that they might do better to deal with him before the election rather than after.

So 1984 is the showdown year.

Monday's speech provided the first full display of Mr. Reagan's recently announced decision to cool his rhetorie. Whether the change will make a difference in the closed society of Moscow is hard to say, but tone is certainly important in the open society of the West. The president is the last person to have to worry that a civil tone implies he bas altered his views of the nature of the Soviet system. The speech also demonstrated how Mr. Reagan intends to blunt the campaign by the American far right to spoil future arms control talks by inducing him to denounce Moscow for allegedly failing to observe past arms control commitments. The president is about to give Congress a classified report listing some seven clear or prohable Soviet violations. On Monday he promised to "take the Soviet compliance record into account" in his defense program and in his approach to arms control.

There has been a brisk struggle over the whole violations issue within the administration and within the president's political constituency. It has been between those who wish to use the violations as a reason for cutting off further negotiations with the Soviets on arms issues and those who think that a continuing effort must be made to get answers to the allegations but that they should not be made a pretext for summarily withdrawing from crucial arms control dealing. Hard-liners to the president's right can be expected to continue their battle. Mr. Reagan, however, seems to be coming down on the side of wariness and continued negotiations — the right side.

- THE WASHINGTON POST

More Than Just Words?

Ten months ago President Reagan delivered to the National Association of Evangelicals what Henry Steele Commager, the historian, described as "the worst presidential speech in American history." Better dead than Red, the president implied, as be denounced "the aggressive impulses of an evil empire."

That is not the way he was talking on Monday. Not for years, be said, has America been as strong vis-a-vis the Russians. Why, that loud hang you just beard is the sound of the window of vulnerability slamming shut. Now, finally, we can trust ourselves to talk to them. Indeed, "in our approach to negotiations, reducing the risk of war, and especially nuclear war, is priority number one."

Priority number one. The president has come a long way in 10 months. Why? The surest explanation was provided on Sunday by the eight other candidates for his job. "There is no issue in our time more dominant than the question of whether we can stop the nuclear arms race," said Gary Hart. Said Walter Mondale, recalling the decline of Leonid Brezhnev. There has not been a serious personal discussion between the president ... and bead of the Soviet Union since 1974."

As President Reagan's speech demonstrates, there is nothing partisan about fears of war and of the deterioration in relations with the Soviet Union. If be means to be re-closted, he had better give them priority.

- But before declaring the importance of negotiation, the president had to overcome two obstacles. First, all that ringing "evil empire" rhetoric. He minimized it as standard cold war polemics. After all, "the Soviets call us imperialist aggressors and worse," but that does not keep us from talking. "Living in this nuclear age makes it imperative that we do talk."

That is especially welcome from the man who in 1980 raised such a shout about the window of vulnerability. The window is the second obstacle to Mr. Reagan's turn toward dialogue. How and when was it closed, thus permitting us to trust ourselves to negotiate? The window, Mr. Reagan said, opened dangerously because American land-based missiles had become vulnerable, tempting the Kremlin to become aggressive. Once be was elected, his remedy was to throw money at, maybe even out, the window. In truth, those missiles are no less vulnerable now than in 1980. Even the new MX missiles are to be based in the "vulnerable" old silos.

Then what has changed? Psychology, the Reagan administration contends: All that military spending has changed the psychology of negotiations. Well, maybe. But what has changed much more clearly is politics. Mr. Reagan knows how many millions of Americans are deeply concerned about the arms race. So now, instead of talking piously about a spiritual test between good and evil, be talks warmly about an imaginary Anya and Ivan meeting an imaginary Sally and Jim and talk-ing about their children and hobbies.

Time to talk, Mr. Reagan says. That is a worthy and welcome position, no matter how far he traveled to achieve it. But he would be more convincing had he done more to pursue it in the last three years, or even on Monday. He could have moved the strategie arms talks along by ratifying the SALT treaty that be is. in fact, observing. He could have pursued a banning nuclear weapons in space. He could have pushed for a comprehensive test ban treaty. He could still do all that, and more. Mr. Reagan says he judges the Russians by their deeds, not their words. That is a sensible way for American voters to judge him.

Other Opinion

Five Months Without Andropov How peculiar a system. Where else but in the glorious Soviet Union could a gentleman, or rather a comrade, who doubles as head of state and secretary-general of the nation's single party, remain invisible for almost five months without anyone publicly saying why?

Yuri Andropov presides over the destiny of 265 million Soviet citizens, not to mention an almost equal number of inhabitants in "brother countries" with restricted autonomy. He is the leader of one of the world's two great empires, and it has sufficient military power to reduce the planet to a barren rock. Is it reasonable to leave the last word to a man whose state of health prevents him, for example, from conversation with any foreign representatives? - André Fontaine in Le Monde (Paris).

About Dialogue at Stockholm

For dialogue, it is necessary to look at the interlocutor with trust and not with perennial suspicion that the other side, pretending to seek weapons parity, slyly tries to assure him-self a position of supremacy. There is no more time for bypocrisy, strategems and delaying tactics, nor least of all for shows of force. Mankind's future ought to be constructed as of today. Tomorrow may be too late. The important thing is to return to negotiating.

- L'Osservatore Romano (Vatican City).

The European Security Conference has now acquired extra significance, since it will provide an opportunity for a meeting between Mr. Shultz and Mr. Gromyko. It takes two to tango; and it now looks as though the two are ready for the music to start up again.

So soon? Mr. Gromyko's presence at Stockholm and the meeting with Mr. Shultz suggest that the Soviet behavior in Geneva was essentially one of playing to the gallery of European opinion, which, in spite of all the Soviet efforts at exhortation and manipulation, showed no sign of altering to undermine the determination of Western governments. The Soviet Union was thus left with no policy. Given the paralysis of leadership in Moscow with the ailing Mr. Andropov, it is hardly in a position to enter into any creative negotiations.

Is There Hope for Stockholm?

B RUSSELS — The events that have led to today's scheduled meeting in Stockholm between George Shultz and Andrei Gromyko leave little room for missiles deployed near their homes. East Germany. illusion. Yet there are positive aspects. This could be the two diplomats' first serious talk - the meeting in Madrid last September after the South Korean plane was shot down hardly qualifies — since they met 15 months ago in New York. At a time when U.S.-Soviet dialogue has been suspended, the meeting should allow the two men to confer without losing face.

They confer against the background of the Stockholm disarmament conference, the first of eight such meetings that were planned in Madrid to carry on the process inaugurated in Helsinki in 1975. Under the Madrid mandate, measures to reinforce East-West confidence are eventually to cover not just a strip of 250 kilometers along the Soviet border, as foreseen in Helsinki, but the whole of Europe.

The Stockholm meeting is not without hope. After all, Mr. Gromyko could have refused to participate in person at the opening of the conference, as he did last October for the UN General Assembly opening.

Moscow has no attractive alternative. Its precondition for resuming the Geneva talks - the dismantling and repatriation of U.S. Euromissiles - is unrealistic. It was while the Kremlin was boycotting the Geneva talks that the U.S. missiles became operational. The absence of a clear Soviet strategy becomes more dangerous each day, particularly since it encourages discontent in Eastern Europe, Differences of opinion are normal and expected in the Atlantic alliance, but they indicate a malaise in the Eastern bloc.

despite threats to "freeze" its relations with West Germany, appears still to want to save the very real advantages it has gained from Bonn's Ostpolitik.

Several factors can still come into play to prevent any serious initiative. One is the absence of Yuri Andropov. Other world leaders have been ill while in power. Franklin Roosevelt showed signs of senility at the Yalta conference; a dying Leonid Brezhnev and a terminally ill Georges Pompidou stayed in power until the end. But Mr. Andropov is simply absent.

There is a precept that says a Soviet leader should show himself in public only in good health or in death. But Mr. Andropov's absence has complicated an already complex international situation.

Moscow's low diplomatic profile could be a scheme to play for time in the hope that Western cohesion will be hurt by rising pacifism or by aggressive rhetoric during Ronald Reagan's re-election campaign.

Meanwhile, Mr. Gromyko has gone to Stockholm and his intentions will soon be revealed. If, as many in the West hope, he is there to seek a compromise to end the Soviet boycott of arms negotiations, he will be taking part in an extraordinarily paradoxical situation: The long-sought goal of East-West cooperation measures extending throughout Europe, from the Atlantic to the Urals, would have been initiated in the shadow of hundreds of SS-20s and of the Pershings and cruise missiles that threaten both sides in Europe.

If the missiles could help lessen the risk of war in Europe, then they will have served some purpose. And only then will they be able to be withdrawn.

Reagan Plays Statesman While Democrats Feud

Cranston recalled the basic point that "Ronald Reagan won an election. He is now our President. He's a disaster. We have to get him out."

For most of the afternoon, however, the Democrats were so husy pummeling each other that they forgot Mr. Reagan and the general election.

On Monday morning, by contrast, Mr. Reagan was focusing at least as much on the electorate as he was on the Kremlin. His speech was designed to quiet domestic fears that his anti-Soviet in-

Mr. McGovern, who despises the Reagan policy, was not asking the other Democrats to be kind to Mondale." Intra-party competition can toughen a nominee for the general election. If

Mr. Mondale is not tough enough to take a few-shots from Mr. Glenn and the others, then he is not the man the Democrats want to send ap against Mr. Reagan in the fall.

From where I sat it looked as though Mr.

Mondale kept his composure for at least 179 of the 180 minutes. The exception was a plaintive "point of personal privilege" appeal to moderator Phil Donahue for help regaining the floor after Mr. Glenn's attack. When Mr. Donahue hesitated. Mr. Mondale just outshouted Mr.

Glenn and made his rebuttal.

I thought Mr. Mondale came out at least even in his exchanges with Mr. Glenn. He was less effective in warding off Mr. Askew and Mr. Hart.

They are fresh opponents and the charges they raised are hard to rebut. Mr. Hart is not alone in thinking Mr. Mondale super-cautious or in bearing a lot of old-fashioned phrases in his rhetoric.

Mr. Askew is not the only one who thinks Mr.

Mondale's commitment to organized labor on protectionist legislation is wormsome.

But in the larger context of the 1984 election.

You Give Friends a Chill Bal: A Vi

BRUSSELS—Former Chancellor
Helmut Schmidt and a former U.S. secretary of defense. James Schlesinger, got into a German-American spat last weekend. They really were not as angry as they sounded. Neither doubts the basic need for cohesion in the alliance. But they were driven by an action-reaction momentum that is building up on both sides of the Atlantic. Trying to be conciliatory, a former French foreign minister, Jean François-Poncet, spoke of "a drifting apart."

Former Secretary of State Henry

Kissinger, who spoke before the storm broke and then flew off to New York for dinner with Prime Minister Zhao Ziyang of China, was moderate. But he told friends he was saving up his bombshell for a few weeks lat when the to-do over his Central America commission report will have abated. That statement is expected to be a tirade against Europeans.

The surprising thing at the three-day conference bere — which was sponsored by Georgetown University's Center for Strategic and Internaonal Studies — was that Americans and Europeans were so surprised by each other's grievances.

All these "formers" comprise much of the foreign policy establishment of the countries involved. All the issues were familiar, the old stalwarts they have been kicking around for years; so were the complaints. Yet several speak of "the crisis."

William Hyland, a former aide to Mr. Kissinger, talked about "serious, thoughtful people in the United States" who now doubt the value of staying in NATO. An important American general, known for extravagant talk, took bets that the United States will quit the alliance by 1990 — just six years away — in revulsion ainst the Europeans' refusal to "take on" the Soviet Union. He did not explain what he meant by "take on," hut clearly it was in the opposite direction to détente.

There is auto-intoxication here, inflammation of sore spots that are real but ought to be soothed, not aggravated. The infection isn't Russian. There is no way Moscow could maneuver or manipulate the allies into such a state of mutual recrimination. Speakers reflected not only their all aiming at the same target.

Up here in New Hampshire, it lonked like the Democrats were going back to their old habit of lining up the firing squad in a circle. The presidential authority and bipartisan tone of Mr.

abdication of leadership, more depressing for the West than anything the absent Yuri Andropov might say. Now, late in the day, President Reagan talks of cooling the facedown with the Russians, its purpose myste-riously achieved. But blowing hot and cold doubles the confusion.

Scott Thompson, who wrote some White House speeches, gave a star-tling view of what all this was sup-posed to be about. He said the Reaean administration was worried at first about Western military weakness and "knew it would take eight to ten years to catch up. So meanwhile we had to do something to put the Soviets off balance."

Mr. Thompson admitted that rhetoric meant to upset the Russians exacted a price in frightening allies and also a lot of Americans. But be considered the operation - which can be called "Big Mouth" - a suc; cess because be said Moscow was now ready to deal.

That is an incredible conclusion, iust when substantive talks have been broken off. It seems to show that the White House illusion of America's capacity to make the world shape up with noise is even greater than appears from outside.

Mr. Kissinger made a point that while the Reagan administration talked very tough, it had not actually provoked any confrontations. But in the matter of nuclear issues, it is words that count. Deeds are the irreversible disaster. So the rhetoric becomes the policy, whether intended or not. There is no way to deliver asides to one audience that the rest of the world doesn't hear. The friction that this has caused in European-American relations is all the greater because Europe has lost confidence in itself.

A generation ago President Kenne-dy spoke of "interdependence" and an alliance based on "two pillars." In those days the major European allies really thought they were building a pillar that could hold up Europe's end of the Atlantic relationship. Now, with scarce signs of American attention or concern, the European Community is in deep distress.

European leaders used to talk about putting into play new initia-tives to strengthen and consolidate the Community Recently, Common Market summit conferences have been only about trying to prevent further decay. It makes people testy. No one is offering the kind of in-traditional Japanese acknowledgment of failure - suicide - as ex-treme, and certainly unacceptable in Christian terms. But resignation of a position of authority in recognition of failure is reasonable. Ignoring per-sonal accountability weakens Americans individually and collectively. However, to blame this shortcoming on a particular president or ad-ministration is to miss the point. Americans grow up in a 'no fault' society; it even extends to our auto insurance. With the single exception of sporting competitions, ours is also a society in which failure is judged to be unacceptable. It is frequently explained away as bad luck. This conditioning begins very ear-ly. The mother who consoles her disappointed toddler when he breaks his favorite toy with the words "It wasn'l your fault" would better say, "What a hame, dear, it's broken; next time you'll have to be more careful."

Without failure as a balance, success can mean relatively little. With out an individual sense of responsibility for ourselves and our actions especially those actions which affect others, a person can be neither a real leader nor a full adult. Yes, some body should have offered to resign

Its individual sequences are bandled with fair stage management but reveal no striking directorial signature. Richard Berry as the protagonist has the film in large measure to himself and it becomes a sort of one-man show. He is an able actor of increasing popularity, but one wearies of his endless hiking, and his adventures are lackluster.

That he outshines such weak assistants as Michel Blanc and Laura Betti and a low-budget production is not to be denied. He meets the challenge bravely with his repertory of grimaces and awkward comportment, and some of his gags and misadventures win the longed-for laughs and will please his lans.

Yet the script prepared for him is wretched stuff that a beginner would have rejected. Its silly plot is utterly unneccessary. All that is required is for Lewis to come on the screen and be as funny as he can.

Gilles Behat's "Rue Barbare" and Jean-Claude Missigen's "Ronde de Nuit" are routine gangster spiels, similar in their sleazy settings to the Berri venture. The first of the duo is excessively hloody, the participants of its sadistic brawls covered with oceans of tomato sauce. The second is a bit more droll, with a dusty siren luring victims to their deaths, some-times shooting them down with her cigarette-bolder.

In Yves Boisset's "Canicule" the angster battles are removed to a farmstead background populated by peasants who seem to have escaped from the pages of Zola's "La Terre." Lee Marvin, who plays its lead, has told an interviewer that, because of the public demand for cience-fiction epics, actors are being replaced by robots in Holly-wood. prisoners. Third, there's ber awareness that a lot of subpolicing is now done by nurses, traffic wardens, doctors, employment clerks and other

Any or all of these interests might have led to a well-crafted play if they had been intelligibly followed up. Instead. Churchill has flung them all at random into a baroque hotchpotch of sketches, concert pieces and blackout images that even a director of Howard Davies's skill and subilety has been unable to pull together into any kind of coherent shape. Thus we get a 90-minute chamber recital, admirably accompanied by the Medici String Quartet, but giving the impression that you've been asked to watch the staff amateur dramatic society of Madame Tussaud's performing an end-of-year romp in the Chamber of Horrors.

One or two moments do work very well, notably a superb John le Carré parody, though you begin to wonder what spies have to do with a crimeand-punishment-through-the-ages survey principally concerned with criminals rather than political activists. About 40 minutes into a brief evening you begin to realize that what Churchill has here are a lot of random notes for a survey of penal reform but nothing that could remotely be called a play. A lot of Royal Shakespeare Company talent is being wasted on a show that might just about get by in a lunchtime pub.

In the vast open spaces of the Prince of Wales, where if there is any justice the cast ought by now to be outnumbering the audience, the Danny La Rue revival of "Hello Dolly!" is both a travesty and a drag in every possible sense. This once-great show, arguably the classic Broadway big-band musical of the 1960s, has been reduced to an end-of-thepier shambles in which every possible expense would appear to bave been spared in everything except the costuming of La Rue, whose gowns were doing a great deal more acting than he was.

Not only does he appear to have only a fleeting acquaintance with the original script (a work of some verbal skill based by Michael Stewart on Thornton Wilder and all the other dramatists who have seen in a story of two small-town clerks having a night on the big city a classic farce, right up to Tom Stoppard's "On the Razzle", he seems to have no idea of the utter havoc and destruction that his bland showbiz amiability wreaks oo the complex character of Dolly Levi. La Rue would have been a lot funnier and better cast as Hedda Gabler.

In a supporting company of quite remarkable inadequacy only Lionel Jeffries, making a welcome return to the stage after a quarter of a century, seems to have the remotest notion of what this show was once about. The rest of it is a derelict, tacky and shoddy shambles of which the Prince of Wales management ought to be deeply ashamed. This is, incidently, the only theater in town that ropes off the front entrance during intermission, presumably to keep the audience from trying to escape.

There is not much comfort to be found at the Gate, where this year's Cambridge Footlights revue is playing a London month. "Hawaiian Cheese Party" is a collection of tired showbiz routines lacking in punch lines and in any discernible attitude about anything.

This could well be a reflection of the current eager-for-employment student mood, but if the entertainment industry is looking toward undergraduate humour for the late 1980s as it did for the '60s and '70s, it bad better be warned that there is not a lot going on at the moment unless you count some James Bond jokes that would have looked ancient in 1965 and an apolitical, aimless lurch back toward the middle of the road for the kind of revue that was (or so I had thought) laid to rest by students from this same university with "Beyond the Fringe" in 1960.

South African Blacks Defy Removal

Rights Groups Slow Resettlement, but Success Is Ambiguous

JOHANNESBURG - In parts of South Africa's brushlands, there stand, incongruously, row upon row of modest tin buildings, glimmering in the heat, morose senti-nels of hard policies.

The structures are outhouses, and they are the first things to be crected in some areas where South Africa's white authorities seek to relocate black people away from "black spots," settlements encir-cled by white-owned land.

Often, the outhouses far outnumber the windowless tin homes that the authorities provide for resettled blacks and that the outhouses are supposed to serve. So those who monitor the involuntary resettlement of blacks count the outhouses, not the homes, to reach an estimate of how many people the government wishes to resettle. # After the 'Golden Age': Some Economic Lessons

As the U.S. Recovery Gathers Steam, Economists Debate the Promises and Dangers of the Future

By Leonard Silk

New York Times Service

N EW YORK — The two decades after World War II have been called a "golden age" of growth and stability for the United States and the rest of the industrial world. "In the 'golden age' of the 1950s and 1960s," said Angus Maddison, a British economist, "economic growth in the advanced capitalist countries surpassed virtually all historical records."

But, starting in the late 1960s, the U.S. economy was battered by a series of economic and political shocks that turned the golden age into an age of tin. First came President Lyndon B. Johnson's "guns and butter" policy, which bred inflation during the Vietnam War; then came President Richard M. Nixon's surprise of Aug. 15, 1971, when he suspended the convertibility of the dollar into gold, imposed wage-price controls and embarked on a highly stimulative inflationary and monetary policy.

International financial chaos and the end of the Bretton Woods monetary system of fixed exchange rates hit the world economy in 1973, and the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries twice in that decade tipped the world into economic shock with monumental increases in oil prices,

As the U.S. economy careened from one foundered, real growth slowed, several deep recessions battered industry, and unemployment rose to the highest rates since the Great Depression. Internationally, mountains of debt, spawned by the explosion in oil prices, threat-ened to produce a world banking crisis.

Strong and Weak Recoveries

But with the dawning of 1983, the darkness began to lift. The United States swung into a strong recovery, spurring weaker recoveries in other industrial countries. And now, a year later, some economists have begun to speculate that the nation, with inflation still low, unemployment still high and industrial capacity ample, may even have an opportunity once again for a sustained period of economic growth reminiscent of the early 1960s.

The Reagan administration, facing an election race this year, bas eagerly embraced that prospect. Its budget for the fiscal year 1985 and projections through 1989 are based on the presi-dent's belief that the nation bas entered a long period of steady growth (4 percent a year during the second half of the decade), subdued inflation (3.5 percent in 1989), lower interest rates (a 5-percent Treasury bill rate by then) and re-out to be a brief interlude of growth, the prelude to another unsettling economic shock?

Marking a Better Course

There is a dissenting view, however, and not just at the White House. It is beld by those who think that enough can be learned from studying the events and disappointments of the past two decades of economic history to mark a better course for the future.

One of the most powerful American economists, Paul A. Volcker, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, asserted this view at a meeting last month of the American Economic Association in San Francisco. The United States. he said, may be able to reverse the experience of the 1970s and demonstrate that "an economy that seemed to be going downhill, with one adverse shock begetting another, can go up as well."

"I do not share," he said, "the doubts and skepticism - indeed the deep cynicism of some -about our capacity as a nation to learn from bitter experience and draw practical lessons for

He saw an "enormous opportunity" to set in train a long period of growth and greater stability, but he stressed that his "happy vision" would not come about if the nation sat back and shock to the next, inflation soared, productivity simply hoped that the "recent good news would produce a lasting momentum of its own."

There are new and unprecedented risks to sustaining progress, Mr. Volcker warned: the enormous budget deficits that loom ahead, the international debt problem, the gaping and still growing imbalance in the United States's international accounts, the strong forces of protectionism, and "not least," he said, "the temptation to return to behavior patterns bred in the years of inflation."

But he thought the trends could be met if the nation acted upon the lessons of the past.

Some General Agreement

Even the skeptics might agree to that proposi-tion. But what are the lessons from history? Although economists and others may differ in degree about what these might be, there appears to be general agreement on a few crucial points:

duced unemployment (5 percent in 1989).
But has the United States truly entered an era of economic calm? Or will 1983 and 1984 turn economists and businessmen about the dawning of a new era. Most expect 1984 to be a good year but are worried, primarily by the buge size of the expected federal deficit, about what lies beyond the election year. A recent poll of 627 managers of financial institutions by A.G. Becker Paribas inc., an investment bank, found that fewer than rcent expect depression or hyperinflation in 1984. But 30 percent expect a depression and 36 percent expect byperinflation before 10 years

Inflation was kicked off in the United States during the Vietnam War, when President Johnson, with the economy approaching full employ-ment, delayed, for political reasons, the difficult thoice among three possible policies: raising taxes, cutting his Great Society programs or curbing military spending. And President Nixon greatly aggravated inflation a few years later with his new economic policy, simultaneously launching a highly stimulative fiscal and monetary policy, clamping on wage and price con-trols, suspending the convertibility of the dollar into gold and embargoing sales of certain American agricultural products. When the controls were lifted after his electoral victory in 1972, the suppressed inflation burst forth. . . . . . ....

Management and Budget, has put it, "as far as the eye can see."

If tight money is employed to keep those inflationary pressures from getting out of hand, the consequence, once again, is likely to be a shooting up of interest rates and another steep

Economists differ on just how much time Mr. Reagan has to put his budget in better order. Some see his so-called "supply side" tax cuts as really Keynesian demand-side tax cuts, which have, combined with an easier monetary policy, fortuitously helped to lift the economy out of the deep recession and should be allowed to push it even closer to full employment.

Thus, Gardner Ackley, professor of economics at the University of Michigan and Chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers under There is a broad consensus among economists President Johnson, told the economists in San that President Ronald Reagan is taking undue Francisco: "For 1984, I see no reason to worry cast if they extend much beyond 1984."

His reasons: Unless curbed by tighter monetary or fiscal policy, the deficits threaten to reaccelerate inflation. And if excess demand is curbed primarily by tight money, as now seems likely, that could generate even higher interest rates and come at the expense of investment and Supply-siders, such as Alan Reynolds of Polynomics Inc., a consulting firm, still contend that concern about budget deficits is vastly more rapid rates of monetary expansion than exaggerated and that it would be foolish to try sanctioned by the Fed's "target ranges" and to reduce them by raising taxes. Mr. Reagan, on that point, still marches with the supply-siders and is determined not to reduce the planned rapid buildup of military spending. Slumps. Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, who believes the president should defer the tax issue until after the election, has laid out a list of options for Mr. Reagan to consider, if the president decides to increase revenues to reduce the fiscal year 1985 deficit from its expected $186billion level. In a memo to the president, which reached the press last week, Mr. Feldstein said, "As you know, there is no chance that we can get all of the proposed spending cuts enacted in

More Heed to World Economy

The United States must pay more heed to the international economy in setting its domestic economic policies. President Nixon, ignoring this rule, slammed the gold window shut to prevent the further outflow of U.S. gold and make it possible for him to pursue a highly stimulative economic and monetary policy. That move set off waves in the world economy that accelerated inflation and eventually ended the Bretton Woods system of fixed exchange rates. Mr. Maddison, the British economist, cites the "messy" collapse of Bretton Woods and the resultant system of floating exchange rates as a major cause of the breakdown of the golden age of growth and the unleashing of stagilation in the 1970s.

Mr. Volcker, in his address to the economists' convention, stressed that the need to close the budget gap and bring down interest rates was "pressing" for international reasons. The level of the dollar interest rates, forced upward by the deficits, he said, "plainly aggravates the strains on the international financial system, strains apparent in the heavy debt burdens of many developing countries and in the persistent and growing flow of capital into the United States, with its counterpart of a widening trade delicit."
Mr. Volcker said he did not share the comfortable assumption of some that working for a better budget balance could wait a year or more.

C. Fred Bergsten, a former assistant secretary of the Treasury, warns that high interest rates and the huge American trade deficit, now threatening to reach $120 billion in 1984, could bring on a deluge of protectionism and wreck the world trading system as other countries retalisted. Foreign governments blame high American interest rates for holding down the European recovery and for straining the finan-

European recovery and for straining the financial resources of developing countries like Brazil, Argentina and Nigeria almost to the breaking point.

But untangling this skein could itself be tricky. Geoffrey Bell, a leading international monetary expert and former British Treasury official, fears that at some stage the process of strengthening the dollar will certainly be re-versed and then the fall of the dollar could be very dramatic." That, however, could deal a new shock in the monetary system.

The Perils of Tight Money

Tight monetary policy must be used with great

There is no doubt any longer about the poten-cy of monetary policy in checking inflation. But, in the process of squeezing inflation down over the past few years, tight monetary policy has taken an enormous toll in lost production, jobs, investment and growth.

There is still a school of economic thought, led by Milton Friedman of the University of Chicago, that insists monetary policy should be properly applied by a simple rule. The money should be increased year by year or, if possible, month by month or day by day, at a rate time, although it will not necessarily rid the economy of cyclical fluctuations in production. EDV:DIT. JIVI IRY IS

Since the fall of 1979, Mr. Volcker has experimented with what he calls "practical monetarism," heeding Professor Friedman's call for more attention to gradual growth of the money supply and less to the level of interest rates. But when tight money produced the recessions of 1980 and 1981-82, Mr. Volcker swung to much paid more heed to interest rates. Thereby, discretionary monetary policy was used as a powerful tool for getting the economy out of deep slumps. All but the most orthodox monetarists saved the world financial system from dangerous crisis and averted further collapse of economic activity.

Linking Jobs and Prices

A better way must be found for combining high imployment and growth with price stability.

With 8.2 percent of the labor force unemployed, this problem does not loom immediately ahead, but if the recovery continues into the mid-1980s, it will. Mandatory price and wage controls, last used by President Nixon, have proved rigid and inefficient. Resisting overstimulus while controls were in place proved impossible for the Nixon administration. When the controls were finally lifted, inflation acceler-

But recessions are a costly way of undoing inflation, too. Thus, many economists have been on the prowl for years to devise a new form of voluntary "incomes policy" to hold back price and wage increases with less pain and less market interference. Arthur F. Burns, as chairman of the Federal Reserve, had been arging an incomes policy when President Nixon leapfrogged past him to mandatory controls.

Henry Wallich, a governor of the Federal Reserve Board, who in the past has favored an incomes policy based on tax incentives, offered a new idea in San Francisco. He suggested "taking a leaf from the wisdom of Japan" with system of two-step wage increases, the second step of which is a bonus. "With a bonus in prospect," said Mr. Wallich, "the first step can be moderate. The second step would reflect price and profit developments in the intervening period." He proposed a dialogue between business and labor, both of which he thought had much to gain from such a plan.

Mr. Volcker also welcomed the new interest among both business and labor in profit-sharing arrangements or other ways of "rewarding workers when things are good, without building an inexorably rising floor on costs."

Chance for Lasting Growth

This is just the top of the list of lessons 10 be learned from the past Economists who share Mr. Volcker's "happy vision" would argue that for the first time in almost two decades the United States and the rest of the world have at least a chance, bowever small, to profit from the

Prudential Bache 'Playing Catch-Up' By Looking to Industry For New Staff While other securities houses raid one another's staffs, Prudential Rose 4.1%

Bache Securities is looking to industry for new staff.

Prudential Bache, a unit of Prudential Insurance Co. of America, has appointed D. Leighton Davies, 55, to its international corporate finance team as senior adviser for communications and high technology. Mr. Davies, who will be based in London, took early retirement last year from Racal Electronics PLC, where he was deputy managing director.

The contacts of Mr. Davies in the electronics industry will help Prudential Bache "create relationships with companies at very senior levels," says William Hulton. head of the firm's international investment banking unit. Mr. Hulton says his new colleague understands the electronics industry and "can talk a language that we miserable investment bankers can't bope to compete with."

Prudential Bache is "playing catch-up" in developing its inter-national investment banking busi-ness, Mr. Hulton says, and hiring veteran executives from outside

James Capel Expands Its Operations

James Capel & Co., a big London stockbroker that claims it can prosper internationally on its own, is opening offices in Tokyo and New York. The company also has operations in Hong Kong and Singapore. Kenneth F. Lucas, a partner who formerly was in London, is heading the Tokyo representative office. In addition, Capel plans to open a threeman New York office "sometime this summer," said Peter Thistleth-wayte, director responsible for Capel's international side. He said that office will be headed by Charles Smedley, a partner who currently is in charge of Capel's international mining desk in London. The New York office will not be Capel's first attempt to establish itself in the United States. About 10 years ago Capel sold its associate company in Chicago, following disappointing results. "We decided that it was easier, given the size of our U.S. business, to do business through an agent," Mr. Thistlethwayte said. In trying to gain a new fonthold in the United States, Capel will aim to "service U.S. clients on international Cedel SA, the Luxembourg-based Eurobond clearing house, has appointed Georges Muller to be its new director of financial control. He previously was the head of foreign-exchange trading and treasury operations at Société Générale in Paris. Industry sources suggest that Mr. Muller may be in line to succeed Joseph Galazka, Cedel's managing director, when he leaves that post June 30.

Ernst Denzel, finance director of BASF AG, the West German chemical group, will retire at the end of June. Responsibility for finance will then be assumed by Ronaldo Schmitz, in addition to his current responsi-hilities for oil and gas and raw-material purchase.

Lehman Bros Kuhn Loeb has set up shop in Geoeya, The New York-based stockbroker's hew office "will initially specialize in international equity sales," said Jorg (George) Burgin, who along with Peter Siegrist, will co-manage the office. SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia — Vucko, the timber wolf, will be the mascot of the 1984 Winter Olympics that are to begin here in less than a month. But the wily way in which the Yugoslavs have handled the financial end of the event suggest that a fox might be a more appropriate symbol.

Operating within an increasingly sluggish national conomy and lacking the established infrastructure for tourism enjoyed by such previous sites as Inns-bruck, Austria, and Lake Placid, New York, the local Olympie Committee has cut its estimated eost for the games to $135 million from an initial $160 million. Meanwhile, the national government in Belgrade is keeping a close watch on the games, hoping that they will boost its economic policy by attracting investment

By Bob Hagerty

LONDON - Two management board members of Westdeutsche Landesbank have stepped down, apparently to take the blame for heavy loan-risk provisions.

The Düsseldorf-hased bank, West Germany's third largest, refused to disclose the reasons for the departures, which were announced late Monday night after a meeting of WestLB's advisory board. But West German banking sources indicated that the executives were fnrced to resign.

The two departing managers are Vinzenz Grothgar, a 49-year-old vice chairman, and Heinrich Viefers. 56, a board member. France Cut Trade Gap in Half in '83,

As the Strong Dollar Lifted Exports

PARIS (Combined Dispatches) — France cut its trade deficit more than 50 percent in 1983, the Ministry of Foreign Trade reported Tuesday. It said that the 1982 trade deficit of 92.70 billion francs ($10.82 billion at current exchange rates) was sliced to 42,25 billion francs in 1983. The trade figures for December showed a 2-million-frane surplus after a year of monthly trade deficits.

In the fourth quarter, the country's balance of payments - which measures trade in merchandise and such nonmerchandise items as services - showed a provisional unadjusted surplus of 1.7 billion francs, "compared with a 16.2-billion deficit in the 1982 period. For all 1983, the current account deficit shrank to 32.7 billion francs from 79.3 billion in

The government was able to halve the deficit five months before the revised target date of April 1984 because French exporters gained a competitive edge as the value of the dollar rose 22.3 percent against the franc over the year, the ministry said. The rising dollar, as well as dwindling markets at home, boosted French exports by 22 percent last vear. Imports rose only 9.7 percent. (UPI, AP, Reuters) year. Imports rose only 9.7 percent.

NEW YORK (LAT) - Warner Amex Cable Communications Inc., the aggressive winner of more big-city cable TV franchises than any other cable company, is continuing a campaign to reduce its losses and legal obligations, asking Dallas officials for concessions similar to those sought last week in Milwaukee.

In addition to rate increases, the company said that it wants to consolidate the number of channels dedicated to local "access" programming and shift associated costs to the city.

Warner Amex said that it wants apartment-complex owners in Dallas to pay for installations or handle billing, because of high customer turnover, then of service and other problems.

Much of Contributions Flows Back in Contracts to American Businesses

By Stuart Auerbach

Washington Post Service WASHINGTON - U.S. companies have received 82 cents in contracts for every dollar the United States has given to the World Bank and its soft-loan affiliate, the International Development Association, World Bank ligures show.

The figures were developed by the World Bank to try to counter-act attempts by the Reagan administration to cut back U.S. participa-tion in the multilateral lending agency, especially in the development association. After taking a whirlwind roundpaid for by Pan Am, the Yugoslav airline JAT, and Coca-Cola, the committee was able to generate more than $20 million in corporate sponsorships through competitive pidding. Contracts were signed with Coke for some $3 million, along with contracts for Kodak, Pan Am, Mitsubishi and others.

Mr. Sucic acknowledged that, although these funds boosted the committee's reserves of bard currency, the games might have been a financial disaster had not the U.S. television network ABC stepped in with a $91.5-million bid for the licensing rights to broadcast the games in the United States. Twothirds of that sum and other network licensing fees will go to the Sarajevo committee, and the rest to the International Olympic Com-

"We gained a significant advancurrency financing at an early stage." Mr. Sucic said. "We received some $115 million in hard currency, of which only $20 million

Having large sums of hard curreney on hand played well into the contracting with about 70 Yugoslav construction companies at fixed rates in Yugoslavia's curren-cy, the dinar, which is not convert-

The strategy, which involved prepayment of construction charges, not only effectively neutralized the impact of fast-rising inflation on construction costs over the past three years. It also, because of the sharp depreciation and devaluation of the dinar against the dollar, assured that the construcoon costs of the games would be covered and that some $10 million in loans from local banks would be paid off by next month, Mr. Sucic

In another major endeavor involving a "capitalist" twist, Zoi Tours persuaded local banks to provide some $6 million in lowinterest loans to local hotel owners

WHERE INTERNATIONAL RISK MEETS MANAGEMEN

Deutsche Mark Options at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange

For over a decade, currency futures and the Chicago Mercantile Exchange's International Monetary Market have been synonymous with risk management worldwide. Now the CME brings a new tool — Deutsche mark options - to institutions and currency traders.

DM options can help broaden trading strategies and better manage fluctuating currency values in today's fast-paced, global markets. Among its uses, these options can:

* provide exchange rate insurance for corporations

* help hedge the exposure of those bank dealers offering customer options protect currency dealers' bids and offers on Deutsche marks.

Together, DM options and futures offer an unparalleled opportunity for market participants to simply and effectively manage risk through the futures market that knows risk best — the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Japanese Bankruptcies Set a Record in 1983 Reuters TOKYO — Japanese corporate bankruptcies reached a record 19.155 in 1983, Tokyo Commerce & Industry Research Co. said Tuesday. The previous record was 18,471 in 1982. Debts totaled 2,584 billion yen ($11.08 billion), up 8 percent from a year earlier. The company said the record was due to a prolonged recession and bankruptcies of small companies unable to benefit from the growth of exports that have led Japan's recent recovery.

GM Is Studying Carmaking on 3 Continents

DETROIT - Roger B. Smith, chairman of General Motors Corp., said GM is studying armaking projects on three continents, but he refused to discuss reports that it may import a refused to discuss reports that it may import a South Korean-made model.

Mr. Smith also said Monday that a suit filed by Chrysler Corp. to block the GM-Toyota joint venture is "a waste of money" for both GM and Chrysler shareholders.

Last week, there were reports that GM may import a small car made in South Korea by Daewoo Motor Co., with which GM has had dealings for many years. The car reportedly would be sold by GM's Pontiac division.

Analysts say South Korea some day may rival Japan as an automotive center in the Far East.

Mr. Smith would not comment specifically on the reports. However, he said GM has "all kinds of plans working all over the world. If we get something going we'll annonnee it."

He said GM, the the world's largest automaker, is considering projects in Africa, South America and Australia.

He did say that South Korea offers GM lower labor rates than the United States and has the echnology to develop a small car.

FRAGMENTS

By Jack Fuller. 211 pp. $12.95. William Morrow & Co., 105 Madison Ave., New York, N.Y. 10016.

Reviewed by Marc Leepson

THE ironic thing about "Fragmeots," Jack Fuller's new novel, is the other Fragments are broken, scattered, disconnected and incomplete. "Fragments," on the other hand, is a complete. Fragments, on the other hand, is a complete book, recounting the whole roller-coaster rize of passage of one soldier, Bill Morgan, starting with why he allows himself to get drafted and ending with the confused adjustments he faces after coming home from

Along the way Fuller depicts each facet of Army life during the Vietnam era: the dazed confusion of the reception centers where recruits and draftees got their first taste of the military; the physical and mental exhaustion of basic training; the unnerving mix of fear and boredom in Vietnam and the joys, disappointments and adjustments involved in coming

"Fragmeots" is complete in another sense. It is a fully realized novel. The plot is believable, the characters sharply drawn, the prose clean and distinctive.

Consider Fuller's description of one of Morgan's buddies, Jackpot: "He had a long. Ho Chi Minh moustache, and in place of the regulation olive-drab jungle bonnet, he wore a madras golf hat bleached out by the sun. Un-der it, he had the face of a boy. But the eyes, they belonged to somebody else's movie: black and white, maybe even silent, that old."

Or this passage conveying the conflicting emotions many soldiers faced when they came home from the nation's most unpopular and controversial war. "You wanted to be home again, home where old connections were waiting like strong, open bonds ready to embrace you and hold you firm. You wanted to plug yourself into them again: parents, friends ideas and images as innocent as youth. And there were times on the way home when the whole country seemed to beckon to you like a sweet mother offering comfort. But there were other times when you realized you were Lazarus back from the dead, and you needed to report what you had seen:" The basic plot of "Fragments" is cooventional war novel fare: Average American boy (22 years old, recent college graduate) gets drafted, proves himself in combat and matures into adulthood. He emerges from the horrors of war basically intact, but with a slightly bruised psyche.

What raises the plot of "Fragments" well above those of conventional war oovels is Jim Neumann, Fuller's enigmatic hero who is portrayed through narrator Morgan's eyes. Jim Neumann is a near mythic physical presence who bulldozes his way through life's toughest situations. But Neumann also has brains and savvy. He cerebrally and physically guides Morgan through basic training, infantry school and the Vietnam jungle.

But there is a catch. During his year in Vietnam, Neumann slowly begins to lose his enthusiasm. Then he inexplicably takes part in an extremely violent incident, and his tour of duty in Vietnam ends in shambles. The fall of the idealistic, gung-ho Neumann

Vietnam Neumann goes to Vietnam armed with a philosophy and the energy and determination to carry out his ideas. Initially he makes impressive strides. He becomes a skilled soldier; be wins over some hearts and minds. But then, inexorably, things start to unravel. Io the end all the good Neumann did is erased by his final, violent act.

Morgan's attempt to make sense of the frag-ments of his life—from the strapnel in his rear end to the reasons behind Neumann's fall— are the core of "Fragments." In Jack Fuller's hands this makes for a strong, compelling

The converse applies throughout 150 countries where the sport is more advanced. In Europe, the one top-level experiment on a plasticized surface is drawing to its three-year close. And on current form Queens Park Rangers, the pioneering little London club that runs on Omniturf, is on-schedule to quality for European soccer and thus confront the continent's ban on stadium in Shepherd's Bush. Synthetic soccer - and it is precisely that - appeals as much as Communism does to the "Better Dead Than Red" brigade. The vast majority of players hate it.

But then, as the Rangers point out, the vast majority of visiting players lose on it, so they would, wouldn't they? And, given that fewer than 15,000 regulars support the Rangers at the Bush (and many of them simply like seeing their team prevail), the issue was irrelevant to mass opinion. Last Friday changed that. British television is experimenting with "live" transmissions of the QPR has lost only 6 of 62 games on Omiturf. In its first season it conceded a mere 9 goals in 21 league games; in the second full season it gave up 16; and after 11 games in Division One has surrendered only 7 goals. Visitors are always invited to work out on the

A plastic pitch can be used when a grass one would be mired in mud or waterlogged. Its resilience can, theoretically, allow a stadium to be open to anything from rock concerts to field hockey without damaging its playing surface (though U.S. football ruts the seams of the carpet and makes the true run of a soccer ball an

Wolfgang Boettcher Plays 100 Concerts A Year, Keeps Chickens and Teaches

By Terry Swartzberg International Herald Tribune

B ERLIN — A Scott Joplin rag was being played by four of the student cellists in a crowded café near West Berlin's Olivaerplatz. Three weeks before, eight of the student cellists had given a "Cellists for Peace" concert in a church in West Berlin's Lichterfelde district. While several of the cellists would be travelling to New York to play in the presti-gious Junge Deutsche Philharmonie tour, most of the others would be seen playing lugubrious airs at funerals and entertaining Sunday strollers in the Charlottenburg Palace grounds.
"I believe we needed a community, and the cello brought us together, the cello and of course Boettcher," says Stefan Uberschar, organizer of the cafe concert and a cello student. "Boettcher" is Wolfgaog Boettcher, 48, former first cellist of the Berlin Philharmonic, who plays almost 100 concert dates a year around the world. He is doing recordings for EMI of great cello works; one coming out later this mooth includes works by Ravel and Bohuslav Martinu. One of Europe's finest cellisis. Boettcher is known not only for his passionate virtuosity and contributions to the literature for the cello, but for his teaching. His former students play in many of the world's best orchestras and several have solo careers.

"Boettcher's studeots play twice as many coocerts as any other group. And they're always there for each other, looking on," said Beatrice Bujois, pianist at Berlin's academy of music, where Boettcher is a professor.

"He puts you on edge and doesn't let you get away with anything less than your best," said Trumpler. The American is being prepped for an audition for an opera house in Hannover. Boettcher has 30 minutes before be leaves to catch a flight to Hamburg and an evening coocert. Trumpler has already tried a difficult passage in the Dvorak coocerto three times.

He begins again. This time, one well-bowed note follows another. He reaches the end of his assigned passage and, unable to resist Dvorak's swirling dance melody, continues.

Suddenly, a second cello is heard - Boettcher is adding the parts of the orchestral accompaniment - and the two play a spontaneous duet. They end it, and smile.

Jawohi," says Boettcher, Trumpler quickly packs his cel-lo. He, too, is in a hurry. He has four hours of practicing, and a funeral to play.
